I strongly believe that the settlement proposed by the Justice Dept. is intolerably unfair to the consumer public and to Microsoft's competitors in the PC software applications field. At a minimum, the settlement must be modified to rectify Microsoft's anti-competitive practice of bundling user applications into its acknowledged monopolistic Windows operating system.

I believe that Microsoft cannot be allowed to combine any application features into its OS, either by constraint by the court, or by severing Microsoft's OS organization from its application organization.
